Carriages and messengers are stopping at the doors momentarily.

With Mrs. Tracy and Miss Tracy and Mrs. Coppinger, Secretary Blaine's daughter, all lying dead, and Secretary Tracy seriously ill and his health impared, governmental circles to-day are enshrouded in sadness and gloom.

President Harrison, as soon as he heard of the calamity, sent assistance from the Executive Mansion to aid the bereaved family, and followed himself to inquire what assistance he could render, and at this hour-11:45 w.-is still with Mr. Tracy.

The members of the Cabinet, with whom Secretary Tracy was very popular, were among the first to call. They were all shocked beyond measure at the calamity and placed their respective houses at the disposal of the afflicted family. As soon as Secretary Tracy can be moved with safety he will be taken to the Executive Mansion. The bodies of Mrs. and Miss Tracy will be taken to the White House this afternoon, and Secretary Tracy will be moved to the same place to-morrow.

I dragged him into a room where there was not so much smoke and broke a window out, and called to Lowe, who was in the alley, to run up a ladder. Then they took the man out, and it proved to be the Secretary. I could not move him any further, for I was exhausted. Then I went back into the smoke and fire again and found a young lady, Marie Tracy, and as I caught hold of her wrists to lift her up the flesh came off her burning hands; she was dead."

Dr. Wales, who is one of the phyicians in attendance upon Secretary Tracy, says this afternoon that the Secretary was getting along very well, and that the only danger now to be eared is that the smoke in his lungs will cause bronchitis. The Secretary, ne said, was bearing up bravely in his

THE Salt Lake Herald says a free press was never disturbed in that. city, to which statement the Tribune replies: Two editors of the Vidette were taken up in the neighborhood of City creek, one was beaten almost to death by Mormons and made to promise to leave the Territory and did leave. Their offense was telling the truth in their newspaper. Another editor had to take refuge in Camp Floyd for stating in his paper the truth about the murder of a Gentile in the streets of this city. Reporters have been repeatedly beaten for telling the truth through the Tribune, and that no newspaper office has been sacked in this city, has only been through the fear that such an attempt would, no matter how it might terminate, seal the doom of Mormonism in the United States. The Herald is a pitiable and bungling liar.

THE Washington Star, a sevencolumn, sixteen-page issue of January 18th, has the following to say of its circulation :

1. It has three times the circulation of any other paper in Washington.

2. Its circulation in Washington is double that of all the other daily papers published in the city added together.

3. It has a larger and fuller circulation in the city where printed, in proportion to reading and pur-chasing populatita, than any other newspaper in the world.

4. It has the largest regular and permanent home circulation of any two-cent afternoon paper in the United States.

THE Free Trade propaganda does not seem to be making much progress in Australasia, judging by the following clipping from an English paper:

Tamania is not yet ripe for Protection, but it ppears to be very n ar it. A motion in for roftheadop ion of a "rot ctiv p licy was only negative by he Housen November 15th, by the Spoker's cong vote. I is understood hat roteet in will be the more question at the next general e ease.

The Free Traders have for some time had a majority of one in New South Wales, and it is becoming more and more evident that any people knowing enough to talk English will know enough to protect their own industries.

Ir is a pleasure to read the ters ing the scheme of Windom's bill. It will bear but a few more blows of that kind. Season with salt and spices to taste, strain and set in a cool place. When cold, take off the grease, and it is ready for use. - The Home.

WHITTIER'S CHILDHOOD.

A Shart Sketch Written by the Quaker Poet's Own Hand,

What can be more appropriate, as the anniversary of our Quaker poet's birthday comes round again, than to let him tell in his own simple and beautiful way the story of his childhood? After visiting the picturesque nook in which nestles the very house in which he was born, and through which babbles the brook where the barefoot boy saw his visions and dreamed his dreams, one can understand something of the spell that nature wove about the sensitive soul of this thoughtful boy. This is taken from a sketch giving the main points of interest in his long and useful life, which was written by his own hand in response to inquiries made of him, and was published in a Boston daily on his eightieth birthday:

"I was born on the 17th of December. 1807, in the easterly part of Haverhill, Mass., in the house built by my first American ancestor, two hundred years ago. My father was a farmer in moderate circumstances, but with strict economy we lived comfortably and respectably. Both of my parents were members of the Society of Friends. I had a brother and two sisters. Our home was somewhat lonely, half hidden in the oak woods, with no house in sight, and we had few companions of our age, and few occasions of recreation. Our school was only for twelve weeks in a year—in the depth of winter, and half a mile distant. On First-days father and mother, and in the sin of London and brought sometimes one of the children, rode forth in the iniquity of Wall street. down to the Friends' meeting-house in Amesbury, eight miles distant. I think I rather enjoyed staying at home and wandering in the woods, or climbing Job's hill, which arose abruptupen the people, and it is a joy to ly from the brook which rippled down see that the men of the West are at the foot of our garden. From the top see that the men of the West are gathering to stamp it back into the silence from which it originated.

Holland is preparing for possible contingencies by voting war estimates. The Dutch have proved themselves sturdy fighters, but the dike-gates are the best defense of the country against invasion. By flooding the country so that it is flooding the country so that it is neither land nor water, but a maddy compound of both, locomotion becomes impossible, except along narrow and easily defended lines.

to us the sound of its two church-bells. We had only about twenty volumes of books, most of them the journals of pioneer ministers in our society. Our only annual was an almanac. ### Pertinent Sayings. A Kansas exchange contains the following:

One of our Sunday-school teachers on a recent occasion told her pupils that when they put their pennies in the contribution box she wanted each one to repeat a Bible verse suitable for one to repeat a Bible verse suitable for the occasion. The first boy dropped in a penny saying: "The Lord lov-eth a cheerful giver." The next boy dropped his cent into the box, saying: "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." The third and youngest boy dropped his penny, saying: "A fool and his money are soon parted.

Tilbury Fox. M. D., the eminent medical counts for the pimples so common to the e and neck. Eating too rich or too gr food, or too hearty eating while the excretory organs are sluggish, causes in most people indigestion or a dyspepsial condit which causes the blood to move sluggishly, and enfeebles the pores. The result is, that the exuding secretions block in the pores, which inflame, each distinct inflammation being a pimple. Dr. Fox therefore does not prescribe "blood purifiers" so called, but a "dyspepsia cure" to be taken, to use his own words "till the dyspeosial symptoms have disappeared." ### THE STREETS.

A Uniform Grade an Actual Necessity. The present condition of the streets is what might have been expected after such a storm as we have had. They have been necessarily cut up more or less for water, sewerage and gas purposes. This work has been measureably done, and steps should measureably done, and steps should be taken to avoid the recurrence of the present condition by establishing fixed grades, making the streets ovating and gutters on either side, that is, make each side of the streets take care of the water from the center, instead of permitting the center to be used for drainage purposes. This done and proper sidewalks put in place by each property holder, will add greaily to the attractiveness of Reno.

attractiveness of Reno.

It is hoped that much systematic work in this direction will be done the coming season.

Death of Judge D. C. Mckinney. In another column will be seen the death notice of Judge D. C. McKinney, who passed away at Austin on the 31st ult. The writer of this, who in Lee county, Illinois, was acquainted with the deceased when a boy, remembers that he came to this coast in either 1849 or 1850, that in early days he was tax collector of Amador county, he was tax collector of Amador county, Cal., and afterwards served as deputy County Clerk, during which time he read law, which fitted him for the position of District Judge, which he held in Lander county Nevada for sixteen years. He was also Past Grand Master of the Masons of Nevada.

The N.-C.-O. Railroad.

George Cunningham, who came in from Sierra Valley last evening, reports two of the N.-C.-O. locomotives off the track just beyond the Antelope House. The two engines with the snot plow were bucking a snowbank in a deep cut, when the rails spread and let them both into the mud, damaging the front engine considerably.

Sustained.

It is rumored that the Suprem Court has sustained the opinion of Judge Bigelow in the case of Fogg and others against the Nevada-California-Oregon Railroad Company. As under-stood, the courts have said the railroad is a tresspass upon any rights—these rights are public, and redress must be had criminally, if at all.

Nearly a Flood.

The warm wind and sun of vesterday took the snow off the south side of Peavine mountains and sent it in a liquid form through the town, crossing the railroad west of George Becker's residence, but aside from wetting down the brick basement of N. W. Roff's residence on Second street, but little damage was done.

an Old Salt Tells of an Encounter with Arab Pirates. son back in the 40's I shipped aboard of a British ship, the Swallow, to make a voyage from Bombay up the Persian Gulf and back, writes an old seaman in the Boston Commercial Bulletin. She was an old craft and a poor sailer, and her crew of twelve men was made up of four or five nationalities. I remember there were two Kanakas, or Sandwich Islanders, one Lascar, a negro or two, and the others were American, English and Dutch. We had scarcely left Bombay when the captain was taken sick with fever. His name was Aldrich, and his wife, who was a woman of thirty, always sailed with him. She now took command in a general way, and this to the satisfaction of the mates, though both were thorough sailors. I heard one of them say that she could take an observation or work a dead reckoning, and I saw from orders she gave that she knew all about a ship.

We had good weather and made good progress until after we were above Muscat, in the Bay of Ormuz. Then, one forenoon we got a squall which did not last ten minutes, but which brought down our fore and main to gallant masts and carried away a sail or two. There was only a light breeze after the squall had passed, and we were lying to and hard at work when an Arabian dhow of about two hundred tons burden came steaming down the coast. We were within four miles of the rocky and mountainous shore, but she was two miles inside of us. She was no sooner made out than the first mate became anxious, and Mrs. Aldrich was sent for to come on deck. She took a good look at the stranger through the glass, and as she turned away she queried of the mate:

"Can we depend on the crew to fight?" "I hope so, ma'am," he replied.

"Have them come aft." All moved aft, and I can remember through all the long years just how she looked and every word she said. She had a worried, anxious look, and no wonder, and there was a trembling in her voice as she said:

"Men, you know that your captain is sick. Yonder comes a pirate if there ever was one. If he captures us, those who live through the fight will go into the interior as slaves and worse. If we are all agreed we can beat him off. What

"We'll fight to the last!" shouted one and the cry was taken up by all.

"Thank God!" she fervently exc'a!med. "Give them a brave fight and no one can be blamed if we are defeated. Sooner than fall into their hands I will blow the old ship sky high and all of us

We had no cannon, but we had fifteen muskets, a lot of cavalry sabers, and the captain had not dodged about those waters with his eyes shut. He had two or three years before purchased a dozen hand-grenades or stink-pots, such as are used by the Chinese. These were brought up with the rest and found to be fused and in good condition. They weighed about two pounds apiece, and each was inclosed in a net, so that it could be tossed quite a distance. We loaded our muskets, took our stations, and were as ready as we could be. The captain's wife alternated between the deck and the cabin. He was out of his head, which was the better for him. and she had his revolver ready for use.

Down came the dhow, foot by foot, with never a cheer from the crowd of cut-throats on her decks. There was a menace in their silence, but it had no effect upon us. We were determined to fight, and to fight to the last. I got the first shot and knocked over a man in take more than a couple of pickles from her forecastle, and then all began to w Shadid not fine ! but forged upon our quarter, and I could see fifty Arabs, each one armed with a crease, crowding against the rail to be ready to board.

"Now, heave," yelled one of the sailors with the bombs, and both lighted the fuses and heaved away. Before we could tell what damage had been done the dhow was alongside. She threw her grapnels, but they did not catch, and she rubbed our whole length and went ahead. As we saw her failure. we blazed away again with the muskets, and every ball found a man. She sailed like a witch, and before she could be checked was a cable length ahead. She had just put her helm over when there was an explosion, followed by a great sheet of flame, and we saw that she was hard hit. Confusion reigned from stem to stern in a moment, and we added to it by peppering away at fair range. All ablaze within five minutes, she fell off, headed for shore, and was run on a reef about a mile away. We saw some save themselves by boats and rafts, being swept upon the shore by the tide, but it was afterwards learned that upward of forty-five men were killed or drowned, and that the loss of the dhow broke up a bad gang of pirates.

Mrs. Aldrich was on deck through it all, emptying the revolver into the crowd as the dhow passed us, and when all was over she went down to her husband with a face only a little whiter and a mouth more firmly set. She did not betray her womanly weakness until she came to thank us. Then she broke down and cried like a-well, just like a

AN ACTOR'S STORY.

How Selfishness Added to the Griping Pangs of Hunger.

"Talk about the ups and downs of an actor's life," remarked a veteran player to a Chicago Tribune reporter the other day. "Why, most actors live a life-time in a single season. The swellest banquet I ever attended and the hardestgot meal I secured both came in the same season. The banquet came early in October, when the star celebrated the anniversary of his debut as a star. The latter came the following spring when we were traveling on our trunks from Washington, D. C., to Louisville, Ky. It was an all-day ride, and we knew that we couldn't eat till we could show again. Jamestown was the dinner station, and the manager and I got to talking over the prospects for chuck. I confided to him that I had ten cents in postage stamps; he said that he had a nickel: so we agreed to shake the rest of the company and feast together. The manager hid himself in the baggageroom at the station and I went up-town to a bakery, where I purchased a pie with our combined wealth, and returned to my friend. The switchman's dinnerpail hung tempting near by and we opened it; but we hadn't the heart to the poor fellow. It was a dainty meal kles, pie and cake (stoma-cha -pie The joke of the whole thing was that the star, a smooth man, had meanwhile arranged to feed the whole company and give his note for the bill. own selfish exclusiveness had shut us

BOOTS AT A BARGAIN.

She was as gentle of eye as a soft gazelle, that is, she was, for this didn't happen this week. It was in a shoe store in Lewiston, and the gentle maiden was an acquaintance of the proprietor and always bought her No. 2's there when she encased her dainty foot in any thing brand new. "Here's something that would fit you," said the jocular proprietor, passing out a pair of wool boots fitted with a pair of lumberman's rubbers. "I'll make you a present of them if you will wear them down to the post-office and back."

"Wait a minute," said she, and in a "minute" she was arrayed in woolen boots and lumberman's rubbers. "Watch me to the post-office," and she was gone. "Her feet beneath her petticoat, like little mice, stole in and out as if they feared the light," wrote the poet two hundred years ago, but he didn't refer to the Lewiston young lady who did this feat on foot, or he never would have said it. She was back in less than ten minutes, red-cheeked and laughing.

"There," said she, as she passed up the boots. "Do them up. I'll send them to my father down in Penobscot County. I never lose a chance to help the folks at home," and the shoe-dealer was as good as his word, and "dad" marveled at the pair of nice wool boots from his thoughtful daughter in Lewiston.— Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Probably the oldest clock in Atlanta, Ga., is in the possession of Jonathan M. Ellis. It is over one hundred years old. The machinery is a curious construction of wood and iron, which was patented by Eli Terry over a century ago, and was made and sold in Plymouth, Conn. The inscription on the inside of the clock was printed by Hudson & Skinner at Hartford, and besides setting forth the fact that the clock is warranted gives the directions for winding up the machinery:
"If the clock goes too fast, lengthen the We had no parachutes in those days, but the balloon was inflated for only a short trip. When ten miles at sea it began to descend, and where do you suppose I landed?"
"In the water, of course," replied the man from Milwankee.
"But I didn't. I gently descended on the deck of a large ship which had been dismasted in a storm and afterward abandoned by her crew. She was loaded with a cargo worth $400,000, and I sailed large Globe-Democrat.

furthermore states that the clock is as good or superior to any clock in the country. The clock has never missed running a single day, nor in all the years gone by has it seriously lost time. It is a curious old affair, tall and unsightly, and shows just below the face a bright print of a soldier in gay uniform.

HER MAJESTY VICTORIA.

Madame Albani Writes Entertainingly of Her Home Life

Mme. Albani in the New York World: A good deal has been said lately in the newspapers concerning Queen Victoria, but so much of it is calculated to give false impressions with regard to the Queen that I am tempted to send you a few notes about her, and, as I have had the honor for a long time past of person ally being acquainted with her Majesty, I hope you will believe they are true.

With regard to the Queen's public capacity it is needless for me to speak, as all the world knows how she has fulfilled her numerous and arduous duties, and I shall therefore confine myself to endeavoring to give some idea of her private life, and especially of her in her Scotch highland home, as it is there that I have seen her most and have had the best opportunity of judging.

The Queen rises early in the morning, and after breakfast reads and answers her letters and transacts business. She is fond of the open air, and if the weather be favorable often has her papers taken into a tent or summer-house upon the lawn, which commands an extensive and most lovely view of Loch nagar, its surrounding mountains and the valley of the Dee.

After this comes a walk or a drive in a pony carriage, and then luncheon, at which no one is ever present except members of the royal family.

During the afternoon the Queen takes a long drive, often extending to over thirty miles and always in an open carriage. She dines late, never before 8:30 p. m. An hour spent in the drawingroom talking with the guests who may have been invited finishes the day, and the Queen retires to rest.

The Queen is faithful to her old friends and thoughtful for every body with whom she comes in contact, re membering the smallest details about them, their families, and their occupations, and giving evidence of this a most unexpected moments. A circumstance which happened to me justifies strongly the truth of this. Four years ago I was singing at the Royal Opera at Berlin, and was not even aware that the Queen knew of my engagement there. I, soon after my debut, was at a large dinner party at the English Embassy, and sitting next to me was one of the gentlemen of the Crown Princess' household. During dinner he put into my hand a telegram, telling me to read it This was from the Queen to her daughter (now the Empress Frederick), recommending me to her and desiring her to do all she could for me Needless to say that after this I was so excited that I could eat no dinner, and I insisted on keeping the telegram, one of my precious souvenirs. Her Majesty is fond of music and is a good musician. She studied music with Mendelssohn and singing with Lablache. As a consequence of this teaching she prefers the old Italian music to any other, but at the same time she can ap preciate any thing that is good in the modern music. This I know from experience, as I have sung all kinds music to her, the new and the old. The Queen is much touched by a simple. homely ballad, and after I have sur her songs like "Robin Adair" or "Folks at Home" I have seen tears in he.

She has been in retirement for a great many years, and during that time has not been present at a single operation performance; yet she remembers well the old artists and the manner in which they rendered the various wellknown roles. For instance, when I told her that I was studying the "Huguenots, and was going to sing it in America, she said that was one of her favorite operas; that she thought Mario was superb as Raoul, and that although Grisi sang the music splendidly, she never realized her idea of the character of Valentine.

The Queen herself looks after the welfare of all her tenants and servants. and if any one of them is sick she is the first one to pay them a visit and take them little comforts.

During her stay in Scotland she takes a pleasure during her drives in stopping at various cottages to ask after the welfare of the inmates. When so occupied the Queen is as kind and simple as any ordinary lady could be. When she paid me one of her first visits and took tea with me my little boy was so much struck with this that he said to me after she was gone: "O mamma, what a little woman for such a big Queen!" It is all this that has made the Queen so beloved by all her subjects. I have endeavored in these few jottings to give a slight idea of Queen Victoria, and if in doing so I have intruded myself too much it is because I can not help it, the above being my personal experience of her Majesty.

HIS FRIEND'S SON. That's Why the Lawyer Was Glad to Oblige His Client. A young man visits the office of an attorney, says the New York Herald, and gives him a claim of $106 to collect. "Your name?" asks the disciple of Blackstone.

"Elijah Simpson," is the reply. "Not the son of my old friend Lige Simpson? Yes? Well, you don't know how glad I am to meet my old friend's son. Give me your hand," and he wrings the young man's hand with the utmost effusion, adding: "I hope you will come in and see me often. It will be a treat for me, I assure you, to have an opportunity of conversing with you about

A week later young Elijah calls again. The lawyer rushed foward to greet him, seizes both his hands and shakes them, repeating his good wishes over and over, and expressing his great pleasure at having had it in his power to serve

"Then you have the money for me?" suggests Simpson.

"Certainly, certainly. Here it is," and he hands an envelope carefully sealed to the young fellow, who tears it open and finds five five-dollar bills.

"Where's the rest?" asks Elijah.

"Oh, my fee is $81," is the reply.

As Simpson edges toward the door he says to his father's friend: 'I guess I'm lucky to get $25. I'm awfully glad you didn't know my grandfather."
